

Co-Director

Australian urban Design
Research Centre

Dr Julian Bolleter is the Co-Director at the Australian Urban Design Research Centre (AUDRC) at the University of Western Australia and is the Program Director of AUDRC's Master of Urban Design course.

His role at the AUDRC also includes conducting research projects for the Australian Research Council and Western Australian state government. Julian is an experienced landscape architect and urban designer and has practised in Australia, the USA, the UK, and the Middle East.

He has completed a PhD and has commercially published six books, 35 peer reviewed journal papers and has received funding from the Australian Research Council, Healthways and the Western Australian Government. He has received several teaching and research related awards from the University of Western Australia, the Planning Institute of Australia, the State Records Office, and the International Planning History Society.
